Design feels effortless when colour is in harmony.

The 60-30-10 rule is a simple yet powerful principle used by interior designers to create balance and visual interest in a space.

60% - Your Foundation

This is the dominant colour in the room, usually found on walls, large furniture, floors, and curtains. It sets the overall mood and gives the eye a place to rest. Think of it as the canvas that holds everything together.

30% - Your Personality Layer

This is the colour that gives your space depth, shape, and rhythm. It usually appears on upholstery, feature walls, rugs, cabinetry, or statement pieces.

10% - Your Spark

This final layer is where you have fun. It's the pop that draws the eye - a burst of energy in the form of scatter cushions, artwork, vases, lamps, or even a bold painted door.
